After jumping from a 7220m subsidiary peak of Mt Everest, Valery Rozov's proximity jump of Mt Kilimanjaro must have felt like a walk in the park. But it was still the first time anyone has BASE jumped from Africa's highest mountain. Rozov, 50, waited two days after a year's planning before a safe window presented. Then he launched from the 5460m Western Breach Wall, flying more than 3km horizontally.

elcome to ZOO, Anika. What you do for a crust?

I'm studying to be a yoga instructor. At first I just wanted to be really flexi but then I realised all the other good stuff that comes with it and I just really enjoy it! I'm pretty flexible!

Talk us through the benefits of being very bendy.

It's great for the gym, and sex would be the most obvious answer [laughs]. And just being a little bit of a show-off sometimes!

Are you a bit of a gym fiend?

Yes, I love the gym! I mostly do yoga and I've just started lifting weights, but I kind of have no idea what I'm doing. I just pretend like I know!

Surely blokes don't mind giving a hand with that...

I have a really hot personal trainer so that obviously helps!

Do you get gawked at while you're lifting?

Yeah, I do but sometimes I can't tell if they're looking at me because I blatantly don't know what I'm doing and look like an idiot, or because I look good. I usually wear really little shorts when I go to the gym...

Do you ever have a revenge perv on the guys?

Yeah, I can't help it! I can appreciate a nice figure when I see one!

What do you go for in a dude?

Obviously I like someone who bothers to look after themselves, but more just being confident because it makes you feel good about yourself.

Aside from eyeing off men, what do you do for fun?

I go to the beach a lot and I like going out with my girlfriends. I travel a lot as well!

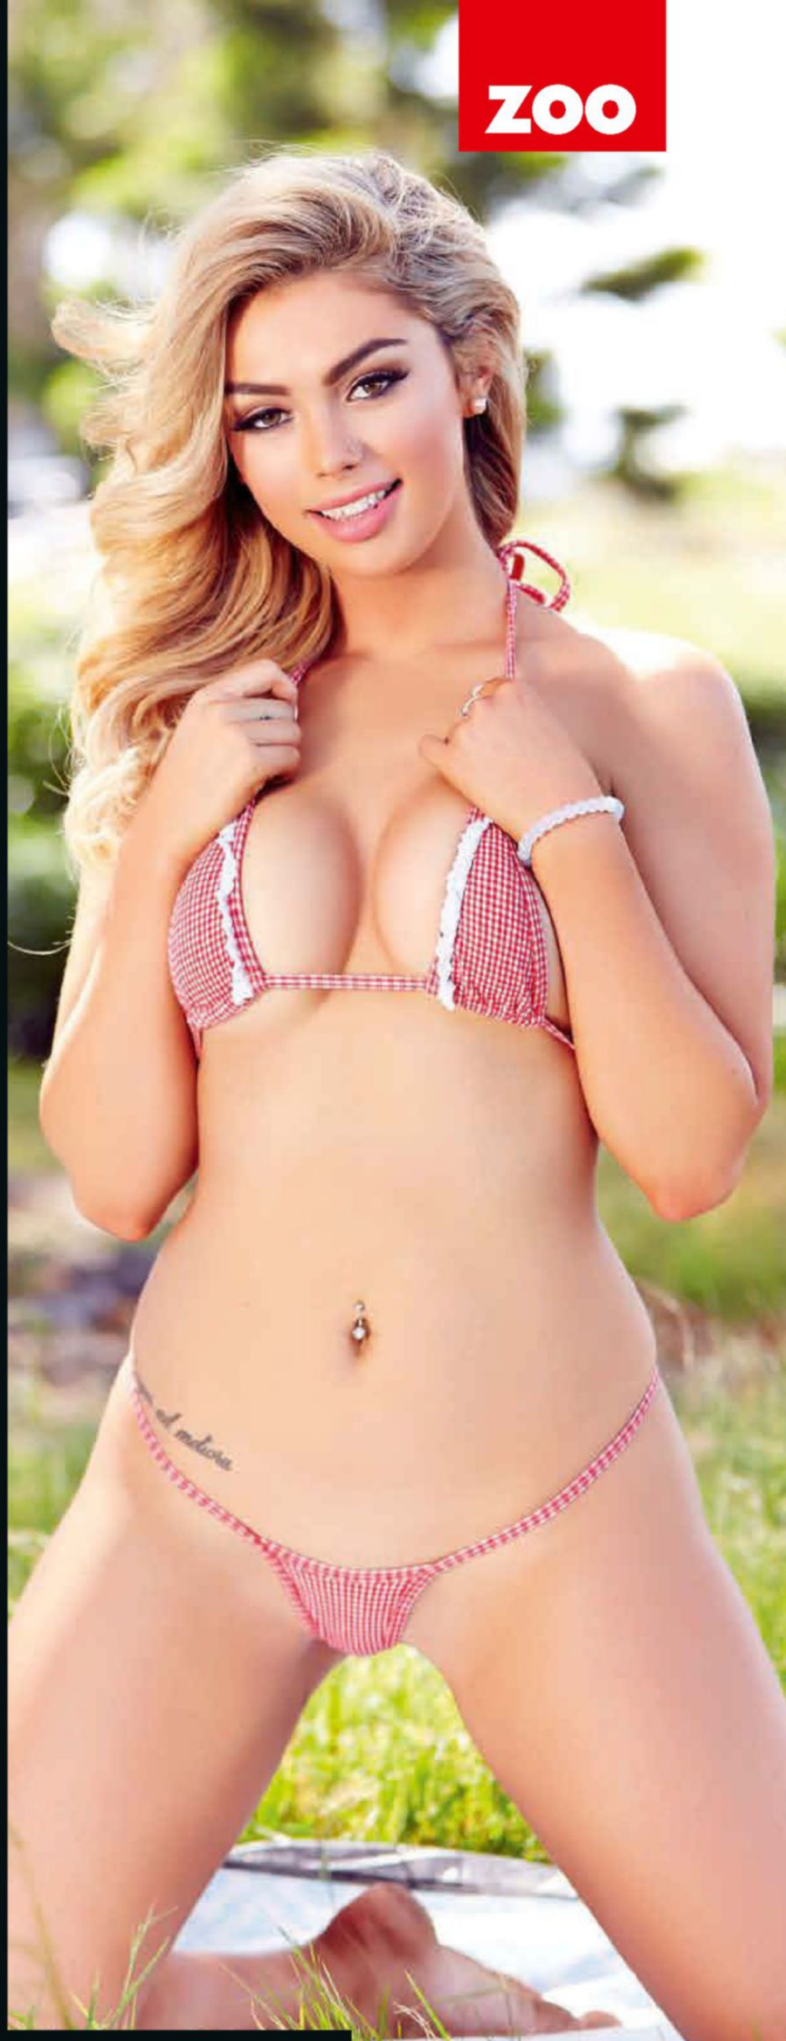

What escapades have you been on lately?

I just got back from Europe three weeks ago! I was living in Sweden, then I went to Croatia and then my favourite bit was definitely Amsterdam on the way home. It was awesome.

So why Sweden?

I wanted to do my OE [Overseas Experience] and I wanted to try something different. Apparently they have really attractive people there so I was like, "Why not?"

ANIKA SHAY

ANIKA SHAY

Did it live up to your expectations?

You know what? It depends what you're into. If you like tall blonds then yep, that's the place to be. But then Croatia's like tall, dark and handsome, so it just depends!

In your opinion, which country has the hottest lads?

Australia!
And the best kissers?
Probably New Zealand!
Maybe I'm a bit biased, though [laughs].

Which accent is the sexiest?

French — it's so sexy, oh my god! I could just listen to them talk all day!

And where did you party the hardest?

Definitely in Amsterdam!
It's so wild — I could stay there for a week and then I'd be like, "I have to go now!" On my birthday night I went to a concert with a famous Dutch rapper, and he pulled me up on stage and made me a birthday rap in front of everybody! It was pretty cool.

For the shoot we had you working it on that picnic rug. Did you enjoy getting your kit off in the park?

Yeah, I loved it! The team were all so good and I hadn't done an outdoor picnic shoot before! I was brought up on a hippie island so where I'm from everybody is very comfortable naked. I'm very confident being nude [laughs]. I always walk around naked — I have to remember to put clothes on!

Please don't. Is the park a good sex location?

Absolutely, it's all I was thinking about the whole time! Just because I'm a really earthy person and I would totally love to do it because I would feel at one with nature.

What's your ultimate outdoor sex fantasy?

I thought that the beach was going to be it but then I did it at the beach and it's actually not all it's cracked up to be, purely because of the sand! Maybe in a tree. I think that would be quite an accomplishment.

That's called doing it koala-style. You're not shy to show some skin over social media, by the looks of things...

I don't think twice about it. We were born naked, so just be comfortable in your body!

What do you think is your sexiest physical asset?

I would say my butt because it's all mine! People have always loved it. I can remember in high school the girls were like, "Your ass is so amazing!" So I'm kind of proud of my butt. People say I have a booty like Beyoncé, so I like that [laughs].

What gets more attention: your butt or your boobs?

Maybe my boobs. Guys also always say, "You've got really beautiful eyes!" I don't know if they mean it or not, they're probably just trying to take the attention off something else [laughs].

What's with your "friskyfriday" hashtag?

That is just my favourite day of the week because it's the end of the week and you get to dress up in whatever you want. And on Friday there's always a bit of vodka involved, so it's frisky!

Can you tell us about your Playboy stint?

I was lucky enough to be the Cyber Girl of the Month this year and then I'm actually flying there in December to be interviewed to maybe be Cyber Girl of the Year! I got to go to London and Bali through that, and now I get to go to America as well! I'm going to LA for a week and I get to go to a cool Playboy party. I just go with the flow!

What does it take to make a great glamour model?

I think it's about being bouncy, obviously in more ways than one [laughs]. Also just having a good attitude and obviously they like that girl-next-door look, but at the same time I have a couple of tattoos and that's still fine. I think it just comes down to what the guys are going to think of you because there are a million different kinds of girls on there.

Finally, do you have any wild plans for rest of the summer that we should know about?

This summer I want to hit all the festivals all through Australia and just enjoy it! I want to have a crazy good summer!

Return of the Tomb Raider

Lara Croft is back, better than ever.
Here's a sneak peek...

IMPROVED CRAFTING

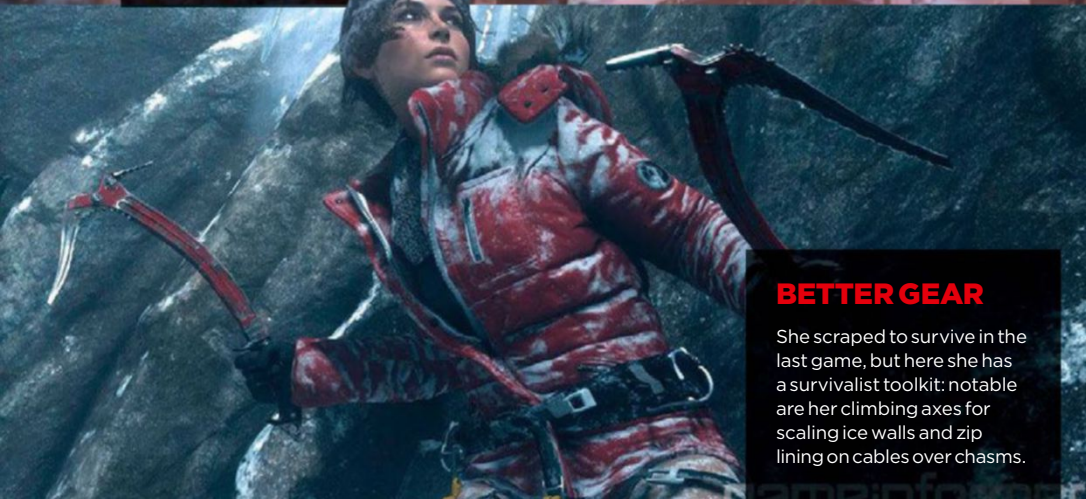

Lara collects resources like plants, minerals, metals, clothes, hides and other rare relics for crafting tools and weapons. Create different types of hunting bows, or use cloths and herbs to bind wounds. Plus you can make poison arrows, traps, Molotov cocktails and more.

GET THE APP!

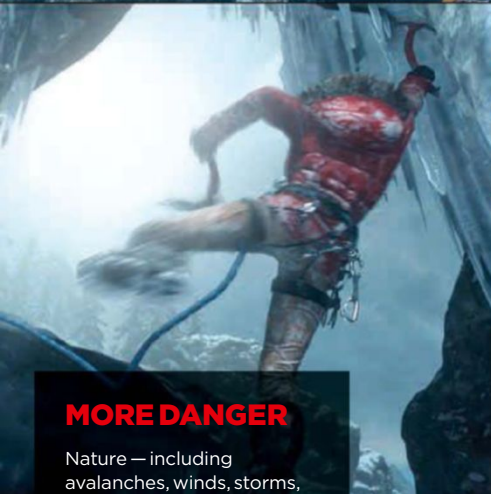

NEW WORLD!

Few people believed Lara Croft's crazy tales from her shipwrecked adventure on Yamatai in the last Tomb Raider game, so she's searching for evidence in the secret society of Kitezh, in distant Siberia. A second location was hinted in the demo, with dusty landscapes, dense forests and underwater caverns.

BETTER GEAR

She scraped to survive in the last game, but here she has a survivalist toolkit: notable are her climbing axes for scaling ice walls and zip lining on cables over chasms.

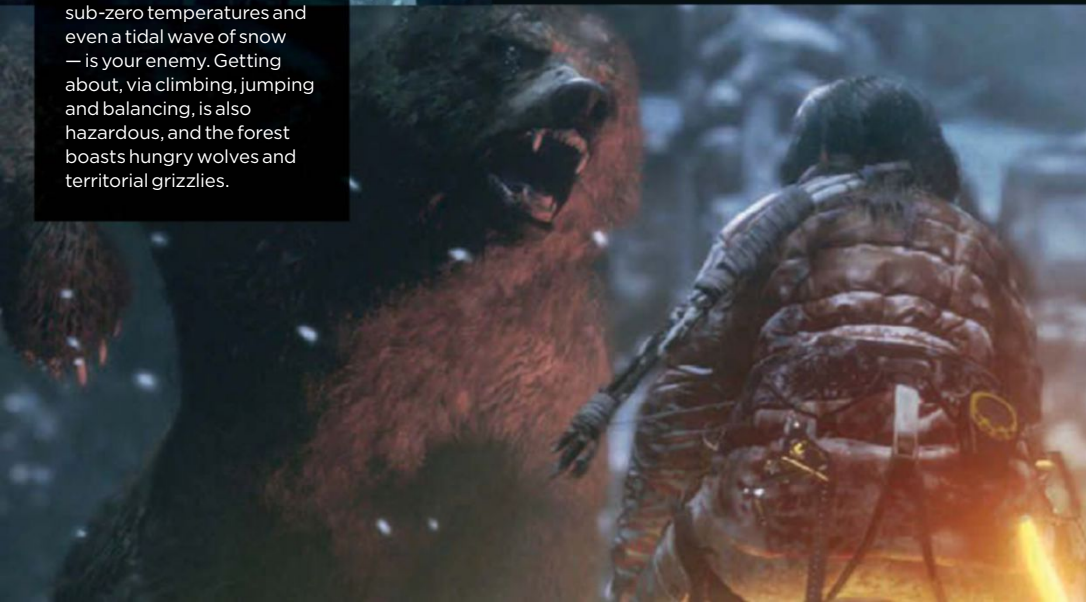

MORE DANGER

Nature — including avalanches, winds, storms, sub-zero temperatures and even a tidal wave of snow — is your enemy. Getting about, via climbing, jumping and balancing, is also hazardous, and the forest boasts hungry wolves and territorial grizzlies.

NOT ALONE

Jonah Maiav (the cook from the Endurance, before it was wrecked) joins Lara's adventure. Members of a group, Trinity, are also following the same clues to Kitezh as Lara. Bad news!

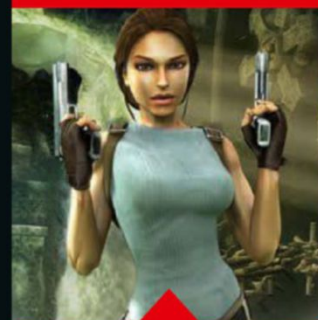

LARA: HOW SHE WENT FROM BLOCKHEAD TO ÜBER-BABE

Taser Russian roulette!

Pain-loving blokes swap bullets for 50,000-volt shocks... because vodka

A possible shortage of bullets in the industrial Russian city of Perm — where ZOO likes to think your gran's hair style was invented — has spawned a version of Russian roulette using Tasers.

Photos posted to Russian social media show the brave/stupid men holding specially designed Tasers to their own and each other's heads.

They then fire the gun with the object — much as with the bullet-based original — to survive until everyone else has been eliminated.

The game's apparently also called Perm, and was reportedly designed by ex-MMA fighter Valery Eshchenko.

Men meet twice a month in a basement gym, paying an entrance fee of 200 rubles ($4). Rounds include shooting yourself, shooting other people and bluffing you've been shot by two darts sunk into your skin blasting 50,000 volts through your body.

The Taser gun's chamber starts with one live cartridge, and a new cartridge is added for each successive round.

From the pictures, it seems mandatory to go the full Putin by removing your T-shirt. Surely it can't be long before the Russian president challenges other world leaders to a celebrity politician version of the game.

Winners receive the pot of entry money back, and get the chance to laugh at their fellow competitors as they writhe around the floor like an epileptic. Ironically, real epileptics aren't allowed to take part in the contest, as electricity can trigger fits.

There's even a variation to the game where three players aim Taser guns at each other, like they're in some demented Western film, and it's called the "Love Triangle".

And that's why you should never cheat on a Russian girlfriend, because if you're lucky, she'll just shoot with you a Taser.

If you're unlucky, then she'll call her uncle in the Russian mafia and everyone you know and love will end up chained to the walls of a cellar in Siberia.

The aim of the game is to be the last man standing — this formation is called the “Love Triangle”

One cartridge is placed in the Taser gun, which has seven chambers and resembles a real pistol

TRANSFORMER: rowboat in disguise

I want to take

Michael Bay

Is the Kormoran yacht a monohull? A catamaran?
Or a trimaran? We're confused and we need a beer...

 The Kormoran luxury yacht can be a budget-busting six different boats at the touch of a button and a swivel of its hydraulic outrigger hulls.

The options include monohull, catamaran (when the folded-in hulls move outwards) and trimaran (once the hulls are fully deployed and the boat becomes the third hull). There's even a flight mode — no jet engines, sadly, but two hydrofoils deploy, the hull risks and you're skidding over the surface faster than a Glenn Maxwell ODI 50.

That leaves night mode — an excuse to throw in some fluoro strip lighting — and “bathing mode”, where a deck unfolds, leaving space for a full esky, a mirror racked up with a bag full of fine cocaine and a couple of strippers you just picked up.

Not that all yacht owners root strippers, but nothing about this boat shouts low-key. It's the yacht that a '70s

James Bond would have steered off into the sunset at the end of the movie with Russian secret agent Alotta Clunge to keep him company.

A 368kW triple-jet drive will propel the seven-metre boat 200km at its top speed of 70kmh in the hydrofoil setting, with the lower water resistance helping save fuel, though the price of a litre at the pumps probably won't be high on the owner's mind.

The manufacturers even call the craft “sustainable”, despite it being made of stainless steel, titanium, teak wood and high-end Boxmark Xtreme leather — which ain't exactly recycled paper and fuel made from strained chip fat.

About $15m was spent on design, with further tweaks being made before a price and production date are announced. In the meantime, you can reserve one via the company's website.

ZOO tests the new NINTENDO 3DS

Keen to buy a handheld console?
Don't do it until you've read this...

BIGGER SCREENS & CHANGEABLE COVERS

The new 3DS comes in two forms and while both feature the same improved CPU, each has a unique feature to tempt you. On the one hand, the 3DS XL's screen is 90 per cent larger than that of the original. On the other, the normal 3DS allows you to customise your case with "Kisekae" faceplates (pictured) and buttons that replicate the colour scheme of the iconic SNES controller.

HEAD-TRACKING 3D TECH

For a handheld console that has long prided itself on the strength of its 3D technology, the shaky viewing angles have always plagued the system. In the past this meant that even the slightest of tilts to the screen would ruin the 3D illusion and cause many a game to blur beyond belief. But not anymore, because now the front-facing camera will auto-detect where your head is and adjust accordingly, no matter what crazy five-degree angle you're viewing it from.

BETTER CONTROLS

Apart from the fact that Nintendo's Circle Pad Pro accessory released in 2012 looked utterly hideous, it did serve one purpose, in signalling the glaring flaw of the original 3DS handheld — namely the lack of a second analogue stick and two extra trigger buttons. Thankfully the new 3DS corrects this from the get go with two new triggers on the back and a "C-Stick" nub, which should rule out having to purchase any more attachments in future.

THE VERDICT

The newest Nintendo handheld might boast a bigger screen, interchangeable faceplates and a much faster CPU, but it's the addressing of several very big issues that dogged the original 3DS that makes this (still) the undisputed number-one handheld gaming console. To use a Nintendo Pokémon analogy: it's as if the original DS has finally evolved to achieve its perfect final form: a beast that's bigger, bolder and better than its previous self in every single way.

THE BEST 3DS GAMES

ZELDA: MAJORA'S MASK 3D

This remastered version of the N64 classic may look graphically superior and have a couple of neat new tricks up its sleeve, but most importantly, the game's as fun and entertaining as it was when it was released 15 years ago.

RESIDENT EVIL: REVELATIONS

It's arguably the best Resident Evil game released in the last five years. In fact it was so popular that Capcom even ported it to the PS4 and Xbox — and there aren't many DS games you can say that about.

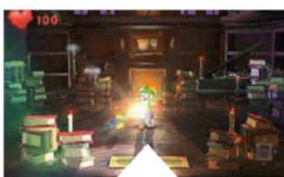

MONSTER HUNTER 4 ULTIMATE

Another release to mark the unveiling of the new 3DS and 3DS XL, and what better than an addition to one of the most addictive games series ever. Be prepared to sink several hours into this engrossing fantasy RPG.

KID ICARUS: UPRISING

This game was a whopping 21 years in the making, and when it finally dropped on the 3DS back in 2012, it was an instant hit. Three years later it's still one of the best-looking and strongest action games available on the console.

LUIGI'S MANSION 2: DARK MOON

Never let it be said that Nintendo doesn't have a ton of absorbing platform games. But in a sea of Mario titles, it's a game featuring the other Italian plumber we'd recommend you buy first.

THE LEGEND OF ZELDA: A LINK BETWEEN WORLDS

One of the coolest Link games since the retro NES days. Link explores Hyrule from a classic top-down view point, and can morph into a painting on the wall to get past certain areas.

SUPER SMASH BROS 3DS

All the fun of the Wii-U's Super Smash Bros in your pocket. But while your screen size might have shrunk, smashing Mario in the head hasn't lost its impact.

FIRE EMBLEM: AWAKENING

A turn-based JRPG that has cool characters, awesome animation sequences and a strategy combat system that makes you want to use your brain.

DRIVEBY

THE HOTTEST NEW WHEELS EVERY WEEK

Lamborghini's INCREDIBLE HULK

You wouldn't like the Huracán GT3 when it's angry

▶ This mean, green, racing machine is Lambo's stab at dominance in the European Blancpain series, which includes the iconic Spa 24 Hours race. Working with Dallara, they've taken the Huracán and souped it up for the track, leaving just the lights and roof intact. The bonnet's centre-mounted air dam is wider than the sky, the fenders' louvres are pinched from its Super Trofeo cousin, and check out that apron.

Those exhaust tips look like they should shoot out mortar shells. While it keeps the road-going 5.2L V10, FIA regs will probably hobble it to 370kW. Its rivals are Audi's R8 LMS Ultra and the McLaren 650S GT3. Game on!

Fisherman's friend

Coal-powered backpack furnace could be the best invention ever for anglers

Keen Serbian angler Aleks Mijatovic was stumped.

Despite wearing multiple pants and jumpers on his fishing trips, he was still so cold he could hear his testicles clinking together. Then one night the solution came to him in a dream: a coal-powered portable backpack!

"It not only kept me warm but also cooked my catch on the spot," he told reporters. "When I woke up I knew exactly what I had to do."

And so he built it, making a video he called "How professional lakefishing in winter", during which he declares, "Winter cannot hurt us. This is only for passionate anglers!"

Aleks welded a metal pipe to the side of an old metal drum, and filled it with coals. For reasons science can't understand, the metal doesn't burn Mijatovic's skin so badly you can see his spine through his flesh.

"It looks ridiculous and potentially dangerous, but he says it's safe and does keep him warm," his mate Ilija Kovacevic told reporters. "He says the heat from his back spreads over his whole body and he feels warm all the time now when fishing."

Mijatovic shot the clip on the Veternica River, which is stocked with barbell, rose carp and chub. And yes, that means he cooks his chub once he's cleaned it.

TERMINATOR: RISE OF THE SEX MACHINES

THE FLESHLIGHT
IS OUR ONLY CHANCE TO FIGHT BACK AGAINST THE MACHINES IN WOMEN'S BEDSIDE TABLES

I received a gift in the mail the other day, and I'm very pleased to announce that I am the proud owner of a brand-new Fleshlight. I bought my dad an iPad for Xmas and he's shown exemplary appreciation by ordering me a Can O' Pussy from the darkest corner of the internet. I now have two, but the new one's a deluxe model with full upgrades and it's cleaner, fresher and tighter. I'll have one last go with old Maude, then toss her over a prison fence. Hopefully the Long Bay showers will be a little less scary for a few weeks.

I've told a few girls about the Flesho and they've all been very troubled by it. I guess they feel a bit like Coca-Cola felt when the first Soda Stream was released: threatened by the fact that men can now make our own at home. When I explain how it works, women get grossed out, and I find that pretty hypocritical. Like their drawer full of high-octane, battery-powered sex toys is clean and wholesome, but Dad buys me a Fleshlight and they're acting like it's some kinda human rights violation.

I truly believe the Fleshlight will have very positive effects on society. As far as sexual options go, all a man has ever had are women and wanking. That's it. That's why bars are full of drunk and desperate dudes hunting right up until closing time.

If we're unsuccessful we get mad about having to wank, and that's why we fight. We're trying to sabotage our hands by smashing them against the faces of strangers.

Dildos have been around for over 4000 years, and vibrators have reached NASA levels of technology, with toys having more self-awareness than a bearded barista. When a girl's in a bar and no guys take her fancy, she knows there's a Cyberdyne Systems T1000 waiting to go downtown. And if she doesn't like the idea of alone time, she can just hook up with another girl and no-one ever thinks it's gay. Society just calls it a "phase" — "I'm not a lesbian, it's just a phase I'm going through at about 1 am most weekends when I've run out of money."

I feel really weirded-out when straight girls make out in a bar 'cos it makes me realise how obsolete men truly are. It's like Coles staff watching two self-checkouts having sex and going, "That's so hot, and in no way indicative of my impending irrelevance as an employee here." We need to face the fact that women really don't need us now that everything is built. With modern science and technology, the Fleshlight is our only chance to fight back against the machines in their bedside tables. The Fleshlight is our John Connor. Hasta la go fk yourselves!

THE SHOCKING TRUTH ABOUT EXECUTIONS

Every year, hundreds go out like the Bali Two.
ZOO takes you behind the executioner's hood...

HOW
KILLED IN INDONESIA

Recently an Indonesian TV station aired a mock-up of how the executions of Andrew Chan and Myuran Sukumaran would proceed (top, right).

A figure dressed in white in a black hood with his hands tied behind his back was led before a row of men with rifles. The men are taken from the paramilitary force Brimob.

In 2003 Aussie paper The Age interviewed Brimob commissioner

An Indonesian TV show

executioners

EXECUTION AMMO

- From 1973 to 2012, 140 people were released from death row in the US due to wrongful convictions.
- From 1976 to 2012, 138 US prisoners volunteered to undergo the death penalty for their crimes.
- Two US states, Illinois and Kentucky, have forbidden doctors from attending executions or participating.
- In 1994, A US judge ruled 180kg Mitchell Rupe too fat to hang, as doing so could pull his head off, which would be cruel and unusual punishment. He died in jail of liver disease instead.
- France used the guillotine for capital punishment until 1977. The last person executed with it was Hamida Djandoubi, who tortured and murdered his girlfriend.

- China uses mobile execution vans for lethal injections. In 2003, the province of Yunnan was issued with 18 of them.

● Families who wanted to reclaim the body of their loved one after execution by shooting in China were charged for the bullet.

- Craig Murray was sacked as UK ambassador to Uzbekistan after exposing the US-allied regime's abuses, including boiling dissidents to death.

● Capital punishment of the last 13 prisoners has cost the state of California $350m per execution.

- The UK's last executions were carried out in 1964, but a gallows for hanging was kept in full working order at Wandsworth Prison until 1993.

● From 1791 to 1892, there were 222 crimes you could be executed for in Britain. One of them was "cutting down an orchard".

- The first Aussie state or territory to abolish the death penalty was Queensland, in 1922. The last was NSW, in 1985.

● Last year the new Sri Lankan executioner resigned after seeing the gallows for the first time. Two recruits had abandoned the job within the past year.

Andrew Chan

Myuran Sukumaran

Bagus Wahyono, who said killings are carried out in the early hours of the morning to avoid attracting a crowd, which would break the ban on public executions.

He used wooded areas 25km from the nearest town and employed decoy cars to fool relatives and media. Executions were also held at deserted beaches.

The shooters are selected on the basis of who's the best shot in practice drills that use dummies as targets. The guns are picked from an armoury, with 10 laid in a line 5-10m from the target. Only two had live rounds, with the rest containing blanks.

Wahyono's preference was for the condemned to be bare-chested and their hearts marked with a sticking plaster by a doctor, but as the Indonesian news showed, white outfits with black marks are also used.

Wahyono often chose a forest to hide his troops so they could avoid facing the victims until they were blindfolded or hooded.

When three Bali bombers were executed in November 2008, the Aussie media was all over it, and the routine they documented is probably quite close to what's still in operation.

According to the website news.com.au, 30 members of Brimob collected the men at 11pm, shackled them hand and foot, and loaded them into trucks, seated with an armed officer either side of them. At the execution spot they were tied to posts — this can be done in either a standing, sitting or kneeling position — before preachers read to them from the Koran.

Prisoners were given a maximum of three minutes to calm themselves at about this stage. A legal official read out their offences and their sentence before the Brimob commander gave the order to fire.

Afterwards the condemned were checked by a doctor to make sure they were dead. If they're still alive a pistol to the temple can be used to finish them. Some prefer to avoid the last step in order to preserve the body for the condemned's relatives, and a man who helped with a 1995 execution when this happened said the prisoner gasped for breath for nearly five minutes as his lungs filled with blood.

WHY FIRING SQUADS ARE COMING BACK IN AMERICA

Botched executions like the notorious case of US murderer Clayton Lockett are leading to calls for lethal injection to be dropped in favour of a return to firing squads. On April 29, 2014, an artery in Lockett's groin was burst by a doctor as he frantically tried to finish the procedure quickly and end the man's pain.

Drugs were injected locally into Lockett instead of through his entire body, due to a faulty line into his bloodstream. That's what the doctor was trying to fix when he ruined the artery, leaving blood splatter over his jacket, prompting prison warden Anita Trammell to call it a "bloody mess". Lockett died several minutes after an official ordered the killing be stopped, and 43 minutes after the first injection, having gasped and writhed for some time.

That case and others like it have raised concerns over health officials' ability to correctly use the cocktail of drugs, and also the choice of drugs used. Inmates who were given the sedative midazolam tried desperately to breathe long after the procedure began.

BOTCHED EXECUTIONS IN THE USA

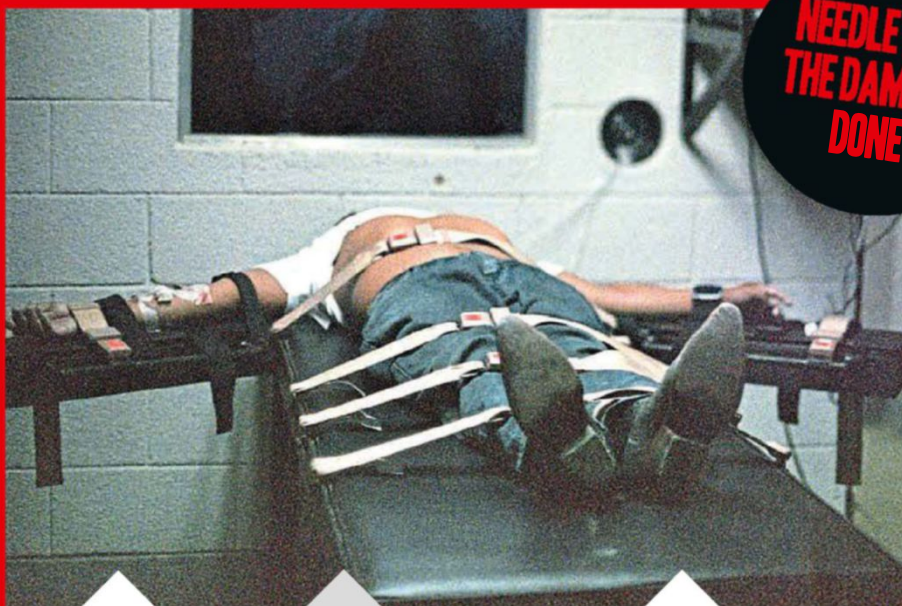

● Professor Austin Sarat of Amherst College looked at all 9000 US executions from 1890 to 2010 and found about three per cent were botched. Lethal injection was the worst method with a 71 per cent botched rate, while the firing squad had a perfect record.

● The Utah House of Representatives has just voted to resume executions by firing squad, motivated by stuffed-up executions and a shortage of the drugs used in lethal injections. Ohio has delayed all executions in 2015 because it can't source the drugs.

LETHAL INJECTIONS: HOW THEY WORK

How American states have been doing it all these years...

1 First, a line is run into the condemned's bloodstream. A person who's hidden behind a screen in another room then presses a series of buttons that begin pumping drugs into the prisoner's system.

2 The prisoner is made unconscious with a sedative. Options include sodium thiopental or pentobarbital. Some makers of the latter drug won't sell it to prisons so it can be used in executions.

3 A drug that paralyses all muscles except the heart is introduced. Options include pancuronium. The aim here is to stop the breathing.

4 A lethal dose of potassium chloride stops the heart. However, some states choose to use just one drug, usually a lethal dose of an anaesthetic, instead of three drugs.

ARE YOU A CRIMINAL WHO'S PLANNING A HOLIDAY? YOU MIGHT WANT TO AVOID...

1 THE UNITED ARAB EMIRATES

Going to Europe? There's a good chance your plane will have a stopover in the UAE, where death by firing squad can be used for treason, murder, rape and kidnapping resulting in death, among other crimes. But death sentences are hardly ever carried out, with the last one happening in 2014, for murder.

2 SINGAPORE

Our neighbour has executed hundreds but suspended the penalty until last year for review. Executions are conducted by hanging at Changi Prison at dawn on a Friday, and crimes punishable by death include kidnapping, treason, mutiny, drug trafficking and manufacture, and piracy endangering life.

3 THAILAND

Most Aussies are aware that drug traffickers get the death penalty in one of our top holiday destinations, but there are 55 capital crimes. These include airplane hijacking and arson resulting in death. Since 2003 they've used lethal injection — the last execution was in 2009 — but prior to that a single executioner used a silenced submachine gun to shoot a prisoner who'd been tied face-first to a wooden cross.

6 SAUDI ARABIA

The only country to regularly perform public executions, including beheading with a sword, for crimes including murder, rape, blasphemy, sorcery and repeated drug use. A beheaded body can be crucified in public. In 2003 Saudi executioner Muhammad Saad al-Beshi gave Arab News a rare interview: "With one stroke of the sword I severed his head. It rolled metres away."

5 IRAN

Amnesty International said at least 360 people were executed there in 2011, mainly by hanging. Stoning used to be used to punish sex crimes, but was removed as an option in 2012. Iran doesn't have a trapdoor system — a cheaper gallows is used, strangling them.

4 CHINA

The undisputed world leader in executions. Human rights group the Dui Hua Foundation estimated China killed 2400 prisoners in 2013 — and that was a 20 per cent drop from 2012. Exact figures are impossible to come by because they're a state secret. There are 55 crimes punishable by death, usually by firing squad (for "common" crimes like murder) or lethal injection (for "economic" crimes like corruption), though the leadership's pledged to move to 100 per cent "more humane" lethal injection for all capital crimes.

WHAT IT'S LIKE TO BE AT AN EXECUTION... OR BE EXECUTED

● "I can feel my body burning." — Michael Wilson, killed by lethal injection in Oklahoma in January 2014

● "At about 10.31am, his stomach swelled up in an unusual way, as though he had a hernia or something like that. Between 10.33am and 10.44am — I could see a clock on the wall of the death house — he struggled and gasped audibly for air." — Lawrence Hummer, who was at the execution of US murderer Dennis McGuire in 2014

● "Just before the poisons began pumping into his veins at 12.18am, Williams struggled mightily against the straps holding down his shoulders, arms and chest to raise his head and stare, hard, at the press corps on the western wall of the witness room for six long seconds." — Kevin Fagan, reporter at the death of Stanley "Tookie" Williams, co-founder of the US Crips gang, in 2005

● "After the first drug was administered, his lips began turning a little bit paler, his skin became pale. After they administered the next drug, it appeared that he was breathing through his mouth for the first time, as though he was trying to control his breathing. He took two or three breaths like that and then from that point on for the next several minutes, when the final drug administered until he was pronounced dead, there was no additional movement from Timothy McVeigh." — Linda Cavanaugh, reporter at the death of the Oklahoma bomber in 2001

● "Wow! That is great. That is awesome! Thank you, warden! Thank you [expletive] warden!" — The last words of Richard Cobb, killed by lethal injection in Texas, 2013

Dakota Johnson in 50 Shades of Grey? Mistake!
HAYLEY NAGLE was the better choice, and these pics prove it...

Welcome to ZOO, Hayley. What the bloody hell have you been up to lately?

I just came back from a holiday in Perth! It was really lovely. I tell you what, the flight is long, though — four and a half hours to still be in Australia is long!

What do you do for a job?

I party for a living! I'm a lingerie waitress so I work at bucks parties and all that sort of stuff! As for my own personal life, a little bit less.

What's the craziest thing you've seen at work?

When people get drunk it's quite fascinating what they do! We did one where they had sumo suits and did jelly wrestling, and we sometimes play beer pong and stuff with them.

Sounds like breakfast time at Charlie Sheen's place. Have things ever got out of control?

I've slapped a guy to the face because he tried to bite me once!

Hannibal Lecter, you rude bastard! You've been to Las Vegas. How wild did that get?

We went to Cancun first and I did a dance-off for MTV! I saw Trey Songz on the beach, and then I went to Miami for Ultra, and then Vegas. I'd say the three days of Miami were the craziest, more than Vegas only because we had really bad weather there — it was kind of cold and overcast. So I really want to go back to Vegas and do it all again! By the end of the month, I was kind of partied out.

Ever heard a pick-up line that made you laugh?

"As long as I've got a face, you've always got somewhere to sit!" And it was a 50-year-old guy in a wheelchair [laughs].

Do you get hit on more as a blonde or brunette?

Nobody likes me as a blonde, everyone tells me to dye it back to brunette! You get noticed more as a blonde but I've always had more compliments as a brunette.

Aussie men are awesome. Please discuss...

I'm always checking them out! I like my Aussies! They don't have to be really built. If they're too built, that's unattractive. I'd rather a tradie any day who can fix something — that's definitely my type of man.

And what do these guys like most about you?

Normally my arse. Just before Christmas I was at a party and I jumped in the pool where there was a bit of broken glass and sat right on it! So my asset is now scarred [laughs].

Ouch! How hard do you work to get a rig like that?

It's kind of natural for me! I probably go to the gym once a week. I'll do legs and then I'm like, "OK, done." I eat small portions all day, though, so I don't overeat.

This shoot's a bit 50 Shades of Grey. Did you like it?

I do a lot of bikini or lingerie shoots, but this is my first dominatrix shoot. Normally I'm in the prissy lingerie. I'm not a very serious person; I'm very light-hearted, so I had to try not to laugh!

Do you think being a dominatrix would be a fun way to mix it up in bed?

To be honest, I would love to belt people [laughs].

Do you have any hidden talents the men of Oz should know about?

I can move my boobs!

That's excellent. Could you move them into the ZOO office? We'll send you the address...

PLUS: UFC'S JENS PULVER SMASHES ZOO MAN!

The NRL's biggest questions – ANSWERED!

This story was carefully researched over 28 beers at our local pub

CAN SOUTHS REPEAT?

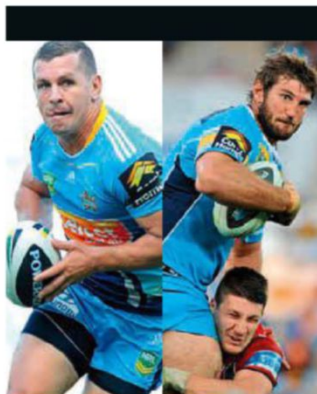

📍 NRL Nines, check. World Club Challenge, check. Souths already have two more trophies in the cabinet before the season has started. There's a rumour coach Michael Maguire had one beer and went straight back to work after the Rabbits broke a 43-year premiership drought last season. That's how diligent and nerdy he is, and that's why the Bunnies won't die wondering in going back-to-back as premiers. Some say it wasn't even a beer and that Maguire had a Fanta. Geek.

IS WESTS COACH JASON TAYLOR UP TO IT?

📍 He had a crack at Souths, and a brief one at Parra, but circumstances have so far conspired against the former goal-kicking maestro showing his coaching wares at the top level. Never will he have a better opportunity. With a team that includes attacking young guns Luke Brooks, Mitchell Moses and James Tedesco, some big forwards and the NSW Origin hooker, Taylor finally has all the plasticine he needs to play with the big boys. Now he just needs to make a spaceship that flies.

WILL THE GOLD COAST TITANS SURVIVE?

📍 “Australia’s Playground”, they call the Gold Coast. Hey, footy players — they don’t mean you! And yet, football teams and the Gold Coast seem destined to be a match made in hell, as the latest scandal involving Titans players, Karmichael Hunt and marching powder may well prove. For a club that’s already experienced off-field drama in all sorts of ways, and a distinct lack of success on it, the ghosts of the Seagulls, Chargers and Giants must loom large as the NRL takes it over.

WILL THE WORLD’S ANGRIEST COACH GEOFF TOOVEY SPONTANEOUSLY COMBUST?

📍 Yes. Yes, he will.

DOES BRONCOS COACH WAYNE BENNETT EVER NEED TO SPEAK AGAIN?

📍 Back at the club where he won six premierships, Bennett is kinda free of the semi-promo role he took on when he travelled south to coach the Dragons and Knights. Expect a few “grandfather of the game”-type comments on the big issues, but not much more as he attempts to steer the Broncos back to the top. A Benedictine monk will give better press conferences this season.

WILL WE HAVE ANY IDEA WHAT’S GOING ON AT THE RUCK?

📍 Two blokes tackle the ball-carrier. Penalty! Who to? Who the hell knows? Toss a coin. This is what we’ve got used to in rugby league. “The wrestle”, as the defensive contest has come to be called, is a freakin’ mess, in which defenders pull every trick in the book to slow down the ruck, dislodge the ball and ensure the player in possession can’t get to his feet, while attackers stumble, crimp metres and drop the ball trying to play it too fast and get an advantage. Result? Mysterious penalties no-one understands, both ways. There’s no clear road map outta this debacle.

ARE MANLY TOAST? PLEASE?

📍 They’ve re-signed tough (yet seemingly always injured) Steve Matai but the rumours around the futures of Cherry-Evans and Kieran Foran remain. Plus long-termers Watmough and Glenn Stewart have left. Plus Geoff Toovey’s nuts. Plus they’ve had a good run. As we know, if you don’t support Manly, you’re willing them to fail. Sadly, the Sea Eagles love that bit.

ARE MELBOURNE STORM’S “BIG THREE” GETTING TOO OLD TO LEAD THEM TO GLORY AGAIN?

📍 Never write off champions, they reckon, but it feels like Billy the Kid is more often off the field than on it these days, while Captain Cam surely can’t go around playing 35-odd games a season for much longer. Cronk is just being Cronk. They’ll still display flashes of brilliance in between their bits going “twang”, but they don’t quite have the quality to keep making the Storm a premiership threat.

WHO THE HELL IS MARWAN KOUKASH?

📍 He sounds like a carpet salesman but is in fact the English billionaire and Palestinian refugee who owns English Super League club Salford Red Devils... but really wants to own an NRL club. Koukash has already made overtures to a number of teams, including the Broncos and Titans, about investing, as well as flagging the idea of an English team playing in the NRL. That’s some away trip. Somehow we don’t think we’ve heard the last of him.

WAS BENJI MARSHALL'S COMEBACK NRL SEASON A FLUKE?

❖ No. Benji — unlike his final few years at Wests, by his own admission — just decided to get fit again, meaning his elusive running has made a stunning return. Plus his horrible foray into rugby union with the Auckland Blues probably whetted his appetite for league playmaking once more. And with a player as talented as Gareth Widdop on the other side of the ruck, Benj-wah is a better-than-good chance of recapturing the form he showed in leading the Tigers to numerous finals campaigns.

IS THERE AN EASY WAY TO TELL NEWCASTLE'S MATA'UTIA BOYS — SIONE, CHANEL AND PAT — APART?

❖ Good luck. We've got no idea (see Morris twins). As far as we can tell, only the youngest, Pat, is without a sleeve tattoo, but no doubt he's rectifying that oversight as we speak. Otherwise, they're big, they're mean, and they run like steam trains through opposition defences. But you'll have to ask their mum about which is which.

WILL JARED WAEREA-HARGREAVES HURT SOMEONE?

❖ Yes. Yes, he will.

WILL RICKY STUART LIFT THE RAIDERS OUT OF THE CELLAR?

❖ Even politicians don't like being forced to go to Canberra to do their jobs, and footballers certainly don't, if the Raiders' mostly doomed recruitment efforts are any indication. Sure, Stuart won a premiership with the Roosters waaay back and he set NSW on the right path back to Origin competitiveness (without winning a series), but there's a fair case his best coaching days are behind him. And the roster is just average. A finals appearance this year would be a bigger surprise than Scotland winning the Cricket World Cup.

WILL ETO NABULI BECOME THIS YEAR'S NRL CULT FIGURE?

❖ Yes. The Fijian unit discovered by Andrew Johns and Brad Fittler carrying guests' bags like rag dolls in a Suva hotel left the Panthers and now has a two-year deal with the Dragons. Even during the pre-season Charity Shield, Nabuli's aerial and ball skills as well as his carries from the wing were a standout, and the big man is set to become a definite fan favourite this year with the Flagons faithful.

WILL WATMOUGH BECAME A NEW FAN FAVOURITE AT THE EELS?

❖ Was he ever a fan favourite? Besides which, his devastating bursts through the middle or at the fringes of the ruck are few and far between these days. We don't reckon he's going to figure in the "Best Buys of the Season" lists in a few months, but they still pick him for State of Origin teams, so whadda we know?

WILL SOMEONE BE ABLE TO TACKLE JOSH MANSOUR ONE ON ONE?

🔗 The pocket battleship from the Panthers has established himself as the world's best ball-running hipster, earning the 24-year-old Australian honours during last year's Four Nations tournament.

The bloke regularly requires at least three defenders to drag him down and the sight of him brushing off would-be solo tacklers has become more regular than Gus Gould moaning about the rules.

WILL BEN BARBA FIND INNER PEACE AND HIS DALLY M-WINNING FORM AT THE SHARKS?

🔗 After leaving the Bulldogs under a cloud of personal problems, then unwanted by the Broncos after only a year, the 2012 Dally M Player of the Year finds himself as one of the marquee players at a still-troubled club. Provided they get some clear air from all the "kisses and hugs" trouble, the Sharks have a decent side and given free rein, Barba could well be one of the game's biggest stars again.

CAN THE COWBOYS FINALLY BECOME PREMIERS?

🔗 Coach Paul Green is definitely building something up north, and with Johnathan Thurston in his team, the Cowboys are capable of more than they have achieved so far. But will they? The roster perhaps just lacks the all-round quality to take out the title but, you know, usual story — make Townsville a fortress, win a few on the road, get some momentum, and then ride that horsey all the way to the grand final.

WILL THE MORRIS BROTHERS DO THEIR ESP THING ONCE MORE AT THE DOGS?

🔗 We've never been able to tell identical twins Brett and Josh apart. We don't even know which one was at the Dragons and is now returning to the Dogs. And if we don't know, how can their opponents? There could be three or four or five Morris kiddies running around out there, such is the brothers' ability to pop up at the end of a backline movement or kick and score a try. Expect spooky things to happen on-field for the Dogs this year.

CAN THE ROOSTERS OVERCOME THE LOSS OF ANTHONY MINICHIELLO?

🔗 We're guessing coach Trent Robinson knows what he's doing in appointing serial bad boys Mitchell Pearce and Jake Friend as co-captains, and while the Roosters have the team to be one of the top contenders for the title yet again, we reckon there'll be teething problems without the steadying influence of "The Count" at the back. C'mon, he'd been there for 15 seasons!

Fighting tips from a UFC legend!

Former Octagon lightweight world champ Jens Pulver smashes ZOO Man's head into a fine paste

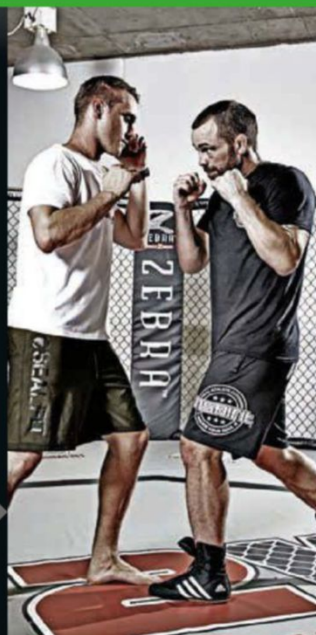

THE FIRST LESSON FOR BEGINNERS: JUDGING DISTANCE

1 Jens reckons the most important thing for novices is learning to judge and control the "pocket". Your jab and footwork are the keys. The jab is your range-finder; it gets you into position to land shots, and helps you get far enough away to avoid them. Here Jens has found the exact distance to ZOO Man's chin.

2 Once you get into range behind the jab, you can land punches with some real power. Here Jens has already connected with a jab and has his hips wound up, ready to fire a left hook that'll hammer our guy's jaw.

3 It's important that the lower half of the body is generating power for the punch. A lot of power should come from the hips, and you can see that Jens's lower body has twisted clockwise from pic 2 to this photo. Bam!

TAKEDOWN DEFENCE 1: THE COLLAR TIE

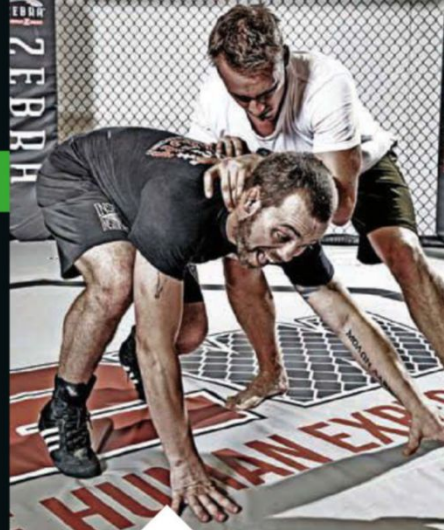

1 You don't want to end up on your back, especially against Jens. Preventing that means being ready to defend your hips and, ideally, control his head.

2 Before they can get in, drop to meet their level and use your lead arm to control the head. Your hand goes on the back of his neck with the forearm on his jaw. This puts you in command 'cos, as Jens says, "Where the head goes, you go."

3 Once you have the head, you can then swing your inside leg (ZOO Man's left) around. Make sure to maintain control of the head and use it to dictate where the other guy goes. Stay beside him and he can't do much back.

TAKEDOWN DEFENCE 2: THE SPRAWL

1 If you didn't get the collar tie on him first, he's got your hips and can potentially knock you on your arse. But it's not over...

2 When the opponent has your hips, you explosively drive your hips and legs back into a sprawl and drive their head into the ground. From that position you can do a chest spin and control the fight.

3 From the sprawl, you spin to the side with a knee in the ribs to keep him in place, always controlling the head with one arm. Why not land a few strikes, too?

HOW TO PULL OFF A REAR NAKED CHOKE

1 It's the easiest submission for a beginner. Your arm comes around the neck with the nook of your elbow in line with your victim's chin.

Why aren't you naked?

2 That same hand grabs your other bicep while your other arm goes along the back of the poor bloke's head.

3 Now squeeze your arms together as if trying to touch your elbows in a scissor-like motion and your opponent will have about five seconds before he's out cold.

HOW TO BEAT A BIGGER DUDE: THE LIVER SHOT

1 It works every time — no matter how much bigger the bloke is, if you get this right, he won't get up. First, get in with a jab or cross to get his guard up, expose the body and make him focus on his head.

2 After throwing your jab/cross, you drop your level while winding up your hips for the next punch. Dropping helps get under their guard and lines you up for the shot to the liver, at the bottom of his ribs on his right.

3 Now unwind and throw a solid hook. If landed properly, your man will be on the deck in a few seconds, unable to do anything but curl up in agony. It's very handy against big, pissed blokes at the pub, 'cos they always expect head shots.

DRAMA/
ROM-COM

FOCUS [MA15+]

1 10

THE GIST: Conman Nicky Spurgeon (Will Smith) gets a hard-on for sexy scammer, Jess (Margot Robbie, The Wolf of Wall Street). They start bumping uglies and neither knows if they can trust each other. Nicky gets spooked and breaks it off. Three years later, Jess — now a successful conwoman — rocks up in Buenos Aires for the same scam as Nicky, throwing him off his game.

ZOO SAYS: The Fresh Prince would need a fresh pair of grundies after working so closely with Robbie. She's the only reason to watch this mediocre rom-com, but she's a bloody good reason!

COMEDY

UNFINISHED BUSINESS [CTC]

8 10

THE GIST: Dan Trunkman (Vince Vaughn) is a struggling small business owner who's nailed a big deal and has to travel to Germany to shake on it. Joining him on the trip are his elderly associate (Tom Wilkinson) and naive new recruit (Dave Franco). A spanner gets thrown in the works when Dan's former bitch of a boss (Sienna Miller) appears in Germany trying to cut his grass with the client. They end up in a boozy battle to impress the bigwigs.

ZOO SAYS: After a few dud comedies, Vaughn is back to his best. It's hilarious watching the boys let loose in Munich, getting seriously fked up at a sex fetish event.

We should have called it Straight to DVD

FANTASY

SEVENTH SON [M]

3 10

THE GIST: A knight named Master Gregory (Jeff Bridges) once again goes up against a powerful witch (Julianne Moore), who he imprisoned centuries ago. He recruits a seventh son of a seventh son (Ben Barnes) as his apprentice, and together they try to save humanity from the witch and a variety of supernatural beasts.

ZOO SAYS: It's a strange movie. One look at the bizarre storyline and it's easy to see why its release date has been delayed more than a Tigerair flight. Stranger yet is why acting legends like Bridges and Moore would sign up for such shite. The only redeeming quality is the monster special effects.

SURVIVAL
HORROR

RESIDENT EVIL: REVELATIONS 2 (EPISODE ONE)

PS4, XB1, PS3, XB360, PC

8/10

THE GIST: You play as Claire Redfield, in a bio terrorism plot set between the events of RE5 and RE6 on a remote island laden with sick bio-organisms. You also get to play Barry Burton in a supporting role, in a similar rotation to how they set up the first Revelations game.

ZOO SAYS: We liked the first Revelations game better because the characters were cooler and the vibe was creepier. Unlike before, however, this one is easier to control and doesn't need to have upscaled graphics. It's a good, scary story, and the Raid mode is an addictive little mini game.

ACTION

DYNASTY WARRIORS 8: EMPIRES

PS4, XB1, PS3, PC

8/10

THE GIST: The Empires variation on this repetitive hack-'n'-slasher has an added element of strategy, which lets you choose which province to attack or defend, like a board game, before heading into battle. There are 83 playable characters, as well as character creation, custom mounts, weapons, troops and banners.

ZOO SAYS: Definitely looks slicker than its predecessors, and the Empires editions are usually the highlight of each entry, making this the one to buy. You even get multiple endings based on your decisions. But how many ways are there to single-handedly slaughter thousands on the battlefield?

FIGHTING

UNDER NIGHT IN-BIRTH EXE: LATE

PS3

5/10

THE GIST: The most ridiculous video game title of 2015 (so far) must've been the result of someone using Google Translate... badly. It's a Japanese 2D fighter, revamped with a new character and some combat mechanic tweaks from their arcade machines to your home entertainment system.

ZOO SAYS: Fans of the anime series, epilepsy-inducing colours and flashes will be all over this button-masher, but we suspect most of you will get over it pretty quickly. The animations are okay, but choppy, and it's all a bit of a head-scratching mess.

I'm the fifth Beagle

INDIE POP

SAN CISCO

GRACETOWN

8TH

SOUNDS LIKE: The WA quartet continue to grow on their second album. They've come a long way since Awkward, with Super Slow showing style and maturity. The Vampire Weekend similarities remain, but the production is slicker and the songwriting varied. ZOO SAYS: A mixed bag, vocally and musically, but a big step up.

I look like a stoned dandelion

INDIE/ELECTRO

BJÖRK

8TH

SOUNDS LIKE: The quirky Icelandic singer/songwriter's ninth album is a brutal listen. The painfully honest lyrics are about her break-up with the father of her kids. The heavy strings and electronic arrangements from

The Haxan Cloak and Arca only make shit even more grim. ZOO SAYS: Love her or hate her, this ballsy effort is Björk's best album in years.

ELECTRO POP

PURITY RING

ANOTHER ETERNITY

7TH

SOUNDS LIKE:

Fans of the Canadian electro duo's debut will be happy to hear the sound remains the same on their follow-up: deep beats form the base for Megan James' child-like vocals. ZOO SAYS: Dark enough not to be lame, unlike their shitty band name.

ROCK

RAISE A LITTLE HELL

9TH

SOUNDS LIKE: If you're into classic rock bands like AC/DC, Thin Lizzy or Australia's Airborne, you should definitely check out this Northern Irish four-piece. Much like those bands, their fifth album is a no-frills take on blues and hard rock. The riffs are instantly memorable, as are the vocal melodies on rockers like The Other Side or soaring ballad Cigarettes & Regret. ZOO SAYS: The heirs to AC/DC's throne. Rock is in good hands.

FUNK

SELF-TITLED

6TH

SOUNDS LIKE:

Two Grammy-nominated producers have united for a funk record that's sleazier than your handsy uncle at a wedding. ZOO SAYS: A blast from the past. The timing couldn't be better with Daft Punk and Mark Ronson proving funk is still a hit.

DON'T MISS THIS WEEK

TV

BRONCOS VS RABBITOHS

CHANNEL NINE, THURSDAY, MARCH 5, 7.30PM

The agonising wait is finally over! Round one of the 2015 NRL season kicks off this Thursday night with last year's champions taking on the Broncos at Suncorp Stadium in Brisbane. It'll be interesting to see how Russell Crowe's boys back it up without superstar Sam Burgess in the ranks.

BLU-RAY

ADVENTURE

THE HUNGER GAMES: MOCKINGJAY PART 1

[M]

3RD

THE GIST: After two Hunger Games, Katniss (Jen Lawrence) is in the hidden District 13, where she reluctantly leads a rebellion against the Capitol and fights to save Peeta (Josh Hutcherson).

ZOO SAYS: This is the third film based on the final book, but they've split it into two parts — so this movie is setting up the finale — which means it's all plot and politics, and less action than Wacko Jacko's wedding night.

ABOUT...

MARS ONE

Seven Aussies have made the final 100 as wannabe astronauts compete for a one-way trip to Mars...

1 There were 202,586 applicants, but just 100 men and women made it through the interview stage and into the reality TV section of selection for the planned 2024 Mars trip

2 A glossy trailer for the upcoming show is online. Bold music, pics of orbiting spacecraft and the Red Planet are cut with audio from the finalists. Text flashes on the screen: "Who has what it takes? To colonise Mars? Never to return"

3 The Mars 100 is a 50/50 mix of men and women, and includes three men and four women from Straya. There's one Victorian, one Sandgroper and five Queenslanders, with a list of qualifications as long as the 54 million-kilometre journey

4 The best named is Queensland's Electra Navarone, whose interests include radiation health, pole dancing and exoplanetary colonisation

5 WA's Josh Richards swapped life as a physicist for stand-up comedy. He'd take his ukulele to Mars "to cheer the team". Or to ensure he's the first one killed

6 Technical challenges remain, such as if they grow their own food, the effects of excess oxygen will kill the colonists in 68 days

7 The reality show will help fund the costly mission. Of the 100 finalists, 24 will undergo tests in an isolation environment designed to mimic the flight and life on the Red Planet

+ The world's largest number, named "Graham's number" after its founder, is so big it wouldn't fit in the observable universe if it was written out in an ordinary format

+ The youngest ever mother was a Peruvian girl aged five years and seven months, who gave birth to a boy in 1939

+ There are 350 million smokers in China. That's more than the entire population of the United States
